Compulsory Training or What?

SEN. VANDENBERG'S criticism of compulsory military training, now moving out of the committee stage to discussion on the floor of congress, should be continued. All the objections and exceptions should be noted. The United States is not ready for star chamber proceedings. But when the objections and exceptions have been noted, there is one question which critics must answer. How can the United States develop the manpower needed to defend it against any combination of aggressors without selecting and training it by an equitable system of selection in advance of the possible crisis which can be averted best by becoming the best prepared nation on earth? Sen. Vandenberg admits the manpower's needed and suggests volunteering. National defense is a duty, not a matter of choice.

Back to Earth

NEWS from the Havana conference, insofar as it gets attention, probably will be inconclusive. When the conference is over, furthermore, net results probably won't be encouraging. This can be predicted safely because it is known in advance that the so-called republics of South America have no notion of being shoved off the deep end by hemispheric unity. They will do what they think is best for their interests, and some of them will decide their interests bear no relationship to the interests of the United States. American unity means little to them; it should but it doesn't.

Perhaps it's best to be prepared in advance for a letdown after the Havana buildup. There has been a natural tendency to expect too much of the other American governments; they, in their turn, have expected too much of the United States. The cruel truth is that a happy hemispheric family could be produced by nothing short of a miracle. All patriots are pulling for it, but only the naive are counting on it.

The rest, getting back to earth, are beginning to talk about making the best of a bad situation, which means letting the bulk of South America do as it pleases provided the United States has reasonable control over what goes on in that part of the continent controlling approaches to the Panama Canal. There is growing disposition to admit that protecting the whole continent would be militarily impossible, even if every government on the continent were eager to be protected.

The Two-Handed Approach

HENRY A. WALLACE says he won't resign his secretaryship while running for vice president on the Democratic ticket because Herbert Hoover didn't resign as secretary of commerce when he ran for president as a member of the Coolidge cabinet in 1928.

Mr. Wallace seems to be in the stall backward. The record reveals that Mr. Hoover's resignation as secretary of commerce was accepted by President Coolidge on Aug. 21, 1928. His successor in the department of commerce was William F. Whiting, the paper manufacturer. It was made plain by the president at the time that the resignation had been in his hands for some time, furthermore, and that he had waited till Aug. 21 to relieve Mr. Hoover of responsibility.

This gives Mr. Wallace a little less than a month to hold down two jobs on a precedent established by Mr. Hoover in 1928. For a month he will be in the position of a man who argues that two wrongs make a right. After Aug. 21 he will have to think up another excuse to hand checks to farmers with one hand and give them that remember-me-on-election-day-pal squeeze with the other.

Last Stop

FOREIGN celebrities arriving in the United States aren't even a dime a dozen. They're trooping in faster than they can become conspicuous. Even the possible arrival of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor scarcely raises the national blood pressure.

A recent arrival by plane was Empress Zita of Austria. Archduke Otto, her son, already had sought refuge here. A daughter and another son also are on hand and the empress hopes to get the rest of her family over here soon. Her brother, Prince Felix of Luxembourg, is coming by boat.

To all the discredited politicians and unemployed rulers, fugitive thinkers, panicky capitalists, despairing artists—human beings who have everything to lose, nothing to gain, under the Nazi-Fascist-Communist system—the United States is the last port of call. There'd be no place to go from here.

It's as much responsibility as taking care of refugee children from Britain. The grownups are only slightly less helpless, but infinitely more troublesome.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 24—Let's pour in upon me every time I write a column suggesting deficiencies in our national defense and the possibility that in the way we are going we may not be able to defend diplomatically the position of this country as a world power when the time comes. Letters complain that this truth serves the cause of those who may arise beyond the seas to challenge our position.

The French people were told for years by their press and government that they were safe and secure, that they need not devote any extra money to protecting themselves. The British did not awaken until after the war began. Only when the disastrous results of the Norwegian expedition sank in upon their minds, did they drop the easy way of appeasement and go to work.

To help penetrate the clouds of euphoric publicity and secrecy (a certain degree of which is naturally necessary in such government undertakings) I have made it my business to try to find out exactly how the national defense commission works, with the following results:

All actual negotiating and signing of contracts for defense weapons and materials is done by the war and navy departments. However, all contracts over $500,000 are sent to William S. Knudsen, production commissioner.

In the case of army tanks, the ordnance department of the army works out the quantity and kind of tanks needed, and submits its recommendations to the office of the assistant secretary of war. The ASOW passes on the recommendations to the Knudsen commission along with data on the companies that are in a position to produce tanks. (With whom the war department has been negotiating) the amount and type wanted, delivery dates, and so forth.

Donald Nelson, formerly of Sears-Roebuck, who is coordinator for the commission then gets to work on the contract in an effort to coordinate these purchases with previous purchases of the army. (For instance, if the army and navy are purchasing uniform cloth with different specifications, Nelson's job is to make the specifications conform for a bulk order which will reduce price and promote efficiency.)

Speeding Up Work. Knudsen then takes the contracts. He knows from his records and experience exactly what the particular company which is to make the tanks has on hand in the way of orders and for whom. It might be that this particular company was so loaded up with armor plate orders for the navy that it couldn't deliver for a long time, whereas there might be another plant, which he knew about, doing some other kind of work that was less important. He might suggest to the army after talking with everyone concerned that they give the contract to the latter company instead.

Nelson, the coordinator, is each of whom is an expert in his own particular line. In the case of tanks, his "hard-line buyer" assistant would furnish advice on the negotiations. If the tank manufacturer could not deliver, say until 1942, because he could not buy the kind of steel necessary for making armor plate, Edward Stettinius, materials commissioner, would get to work and find out if there was not some steel plant which could turn out the particular steel wanted. As a matter of fact, he actually did get a steel company to open up two new furnaces recently to aid in the production of armor plate for tanks. He might even go so far, if he found there were not enough existing plants to make certain raw materials, to recommend to Mr. Roosevelt that the government build such plants. (T. V. A. expansion is an example of this.)

Suppose the army heard after the contract had been let that there was a strike threatened in some plant Sidney Hillman, labor commissioner, would immediately be called in and would in turn convene his labor policy advisory committee or such members of it who were heads of the unions involved. He would see to it that the strike did not take place.

Subsequently the army might become dissatisfied about the price. In this case, Leon Henderson, price commissioner who has been making voluminous charts and studies of prices over a period of years, would go to work.

Mobilization Skeleton. The present organizations are really based on the industrial mobilization plan, except the administrators do not have the absolute authority over industry and the country that they would have if the war plan were put into effect.

The mobilization plan was worked up secretly by the war department to be called into operation when war becomes imminent. The President so far has merely initiated steps along the various lines of the plan, steps which could be extended into full operation almost overnight, bringing absolute price fixing, labor control, transportation direction, foreign trade, raw material, and finance control, and so forth.

Women in Politics

Another Milestone of Progress Reached in 1940.

Covering both the Chicago and Philadelphia conventions, the women of America had excellent opportunities to see just how much women count in practical politics today.

By SIGRID ARNE Associated Press Writer.

WASHINGTON, July 24—Now that convention smoke has cleared away, women in both parties have turned up with such a wealth of new privileges and duties that they are virtually on an equal political footing with the men.

At Philadelphia the Republican convention agreed that come 1944 women will have equal representation on all convention committees, which means, most importantly, they will sit on the platform committee that decides the party's policy.

At Chicago the Democratic convention passed a resolution giving women 50-50 representation immediately on the platform committee. Twenty-four women joined the last days' deliberations.

Both convention floors were bright with women's hats and huge corsages. Both groups had increased numbers of women—delegates and alternates—accredited.

Republican women had garnered 78 delegates plus, 231 alternates. Democratic women had 202 delegates and 367 alternates. In the hotel suites where state delegations argued issues the change was most obvious. Women spoke up, argued, buttonholed and voted with their men colleagues.

Even in the convention sessions there was a noticeable change. Women were spot-lighted on the speaker's platform. Not so much as stumblers over their lines. Most of them are veterans of local soap-boxes.

But they kept their femininity. Most of the women had special dresses for the occasion.

They Manage Campaigns. In Philadelphia the convention was treated to two women managers for candidates' campaigns. Brown-eyed Mrs. Robert A. Taft spent 14 hours a day greeting the people she hoped would vote her husband, the Ohio senator, into the nominee's post. She was a good loser, too. Said, "Well, maybe it's best for the family."

At the Thomas Dewey headquarters in Philadelphia the co-manager was taciturn, elderly Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, daughter of legendary Sen. Mark Hanna, and a former member of congress, herself.

In Philadelphia another precept was broken: A woman nominated a candidate. Many have seconded nominations. But none had made the introductory speech until Gladys Pyle, former South Dakota state legislator, named Gov. Harlan Bushfield. It was admittedly not a nomination that would ride to victory, but, then, that's the way most of the women's political paths have started. From the unimportant to the policy-making.

In both conventions the women had small committees that presented women's platforms. The Democrats' committee of 18 women was an official part of the convention for the first time. In previous years they had met unofficially and coaxed a man to read their views to the drafting board.

They Seek Reform. The women's emphasis on both sides has been on social reforms. This year both women's groups were most interested in foreign policy because of their hatred for war. Both planks probably would have been more belligerent had not the conventions been so well attended by women.

Secretary Frances Perkins gives a large share of the credit for the party's 21st years of the New Deal to women workers. She recalls that in 1924 there was a small group of determined New York women who met informally in her downtown office to draw up a women's platform. They wanted to protect women and children workers, to get better health and housing standards.

They had no voice in the platform committee, so four of the women sat up all night in a hotel corridor waiting to find some champion who would take their small draft into the platform committee. Those four women are still known today: Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Rep. Caroline O'Day of New York, Miss Perkins, and Marian Dickerman, principal of the school where Mrs. Roosevelt once taught.

Miss Perkins says, with obvious satisfaction: "The reforms we wanted in 1924 are all laws today."

You'll Hear From Them. When the campaign speeches began rumbling across the land in September there will be almost as many sopranos as basses on the air.

The Democrats have 30,000 women trained in speech and New Deal ideology who go out and lead educational sessions on such subjects as public power and foreign policy. There are an additional 120,000 women who are responsible for keeping an eye on the local running of New Deal laws.

Mrs. G. L. Sowell entertained the Mottet club at her home on Olney avenue for the pleasure of Mrs. L. N. Palmer of Long View, Tex., and Mrs. J. F. Whalley of Griffin, Ga., who were her house guests.

A picked team of Marion recreation hall players defeated the Hamilton Red Sox of Crestline 4-3 at Crestline. Home runs by A. Baidart and Niemeyer contributed in Marion's victory. The battery for Marion was Kellogg and Conkle, for Crestline Johnson and Bargo.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Saturday, July 24, 1920. Miss Georgia Bumgarner of Marion and Lester Altmeyer of Prospect township were married at the United Brethren parsonage by Rev. D. C. Hollinger.

Senator J. S. Fitchinghouse of New Jersey was a guest of Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican presidential nominee, issued a statement here reviewing the national political situation and predicting a victory for the Republican nominee. Senator Harding expressed gratification over the many expressions of approval of his Thursday speech of acceptance. He said it is very pleasing to be assured that I have correctly spoken the Republican interpretation of the platform.

Lafayette Young, former senator from Iowa and publisher of the Des Moines Capital, was a visitor of Senator Harding. Mr. Young issued a statement after his conference with the senator expressing his pleasure over the acceptance speech. "Being a newspaper man, he had the intuition as regards what the public had in mind," Mr. Young said. "Nobody but a newspaperman would have thought of making that summary of his career."

A letter received at campaign headquarters predicted that Senator Harding would carry Oregon by 25,000 to 50,000 votes in November.

ganizing as many as possible. Their Federation of Republican Clubs is new since the last campaign, but the director, Marion Martin, from Maine, claims 250,000 membership. These women meet locally and talk over issues preparatory for door-to-door canvassing.

It's a long way from the start. In 1892 three women slipped quietly, conversationally attired, into the Republican convention.

In 1900 the Democrats seated three similarly decorous women delegates. It wasn't until 1940 that a woman addressed a full convention on anything but purely feminine interests. Then it was pretty, vivacious Mrs. Thomas McCallister of Michigan, who heads the Democrats' women's division. In 1900 she was bold and manly. She met every issue face to face. Senator Harding takes the position that we are friendly to Europe as we always have been; we are willing to help as we always have, but we are unwilling to sign away the American Constitution which would have been done by the adoption of the peace treaty and covenants.

CROSSES ARE OFTEN ERECTED AT LONELY SPOTS WHERE TRAVELERS HAVE DIED, IN ARGENTINA

Knudsen Goes To Work

From Business Week

WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN is violating his own pronouncement that "an executive is no good if he can't do his job in an ordinary working day at the office." When he came to Washington as head production man of the national defense commission his first priority order was personal. It set aside sociability.

Detroit knows Bill Knudsen as an expensive soul whose office hours are enlivened by company music, cheerful dinners. In Washington he has established a hermitage. He even left his family behind when he moved into this street. Only other occupant is his Filipino boy.

At 6:30 each morning a heavy tread upstairs tells the Filipino boss is up. After breakfast Mr. Knudsen is driven to work by a borrowed colored chauffeur in one of the cars General Motors keeps at important points for its own brass hats or high ranking visitors. He doesn't read the paper on the way down just sits and lays out the day's work.

In his outer office three vacant desks await stenographers still enjoying that precious morning snooze. At a fourth desk, spectral and alert, sits W. M. Collins, Mr. Knudsen's secretary. (He hasn't had a female secretary since he found one in tears over such words used in a conference.) Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Collins swap good mornings as the former makes a bee line for his office.

Collins has already shuffled and unwound the morning mail of 400 to 500 letters. The boss has time to study the important residue until 9 o'clock when the appointments begin. Some letters he has time to answer. Mr. Knudsen doesn't dictate replies. Instead he takes a pencil and a big yellow pad and writes out the answers in long-hand.

Soon after 9 o'clock comes the deluge of visitors. Collins sieves out the pests and the unimportant. He tries to hold appointments to 15 minutes. Knudsen is so sparing with his conversation and so direct with instructions that it seldom takes long to polish off a business session. Most of the visitors are executives in charge of production in plants preparing for war orders but there is a sprinkling of big company heads. By 1 o'clock the parade thins out and Knudsen knocks off for lunch. He eats a moderate mid-day meal (perhaps washed down by beer) in the private dining room of the building. Ordinarily this is sacred to the august board of governors of the federal reserve but they have invited defense commission members to make use of it. Mr. Knudsen rarely takes more than a half hour for lunch.

AFTERNOONS are like mornings except there is more likely to be time out between visits. In his office Mr. Knudsen sits hunched, huge and relaxed over his desk. But in halls he likes to wander down halls for unexpected visits.

Thursday afternoon at 2 the defense commission goes to the White House for an hour's conference with the President. Here policy questions are settled.

Back in his office, Defense Commissioner Knudsen stays on the job until 7, sometimes later. Final hours are devoted to writing down more replies to letters, reading urgent reports, giving Collins instructions for the following day.

Joe Turns Out Not To Be the Pure Type But It Costs Him a New Dicer To Find Out.

By DAMON RUNYON

Mr. Joe Turp Writes From Brooklyn:

DEAR SIR: The other night I saw to my regret that you were not here. I think I will buy me a new car tomorrow. She sees well Joe I will meet you at your lunch hour and go with you. I see you because I know just the kind of hat you want to have. I see what other kind of shoes you want me to have except the kind I wear. I see what I will show you.

So the next day she met me and we went to hat store and when I got inside she saw to my regret that you were not here. I think I will buy me a new car tomorrow. She sees well Joe I will meet you at your lunch hour and go with you. I see you because I know just the kind of hat you want to have. I see what other kind of shoes you want me to have except the kind I wear. I see what I will show you.

So I bought the hat and that evening I went home and when I was passing Grogans a low standing there looked at my hat and laughed and said o-o. I stopped and said did you speak to me? He said no. I don't know you. I saw you before in my life. I see I thought heard you say something. He said O-o did something when I saw your kady. I see o-o I laughed too. I am going to laugh again. He said.

I see why? He sees because that is a very funny hat. I see what is funny about it? He sees that I see what is funny. It looks like you have a piece of your wife's old dress tied around it. I see that is a puggaree, mister, and it is the last thing. He ha-ha-ha. But it is not any funny than that kisser you got under it.

I see O you don't like my face hat? He said I did not say I do not like it. I just see it is funny. Where did you get that hat anyway? My wife Ethel picked it out for me. He said well brother in that case I suppose I ought to apologize. A guy is not responsible for what his wife does. I see did your wife pick out a dirty old case you have got on your head you or did you get it out of an ash can?

He said don't you like my hat? I see no. I don't like anything about you. I see you just a wise guy who stands around making cracks. I see I think I will just bust you for luck and he saw now wait a minute free I was just kidding about your hat. It is very nice and your wife has good taste. I am mine had half as much. Let me look at it dicer of yours will you?

THEN he reached out and took my hat by the brim and gave it a quick jerk so it came down over my eyes and when I could not see a thing he punched me in the stomach and knocked the wind out of me and ran off by street. He half into the brim off when he jerked it so I carried it home in my hand and when I got in the door my wife Ethel sees Joe why is the matter with your new hat?

I see I have had a little accident with it. I see why that's too bad Joe but do you know what? I have been thinking that puggaree and while it's very nice it does not make a look as dashing as you do in a hard hat. I just love the way you wear a hard straw hat. I see on your head Joe. I guess you are the puggaree type. I see no I guess not but I wish you had thought of it before.

3 MEN ESCAPE IN ACCIDENT

Truck Burns After Colliding With Road Grader in Wyandot County.

UPPER SANDUSKY, July 24—

Three men escaped with minor injuries and a tractor-trailer was destroyed by fire at noon Tuesday in an unusual accident four miles east of here on U. S. route 30-N. The truck, driven by Harold Colner, 30, of Akron, and owned by the Motor Cargo, Inc. of Akron, was enroute to Minneapolis, Minn., with a load of automobile tires and miscellaneous merchandise. The truck approached a state highway road grader driven by John Rouse, 30, of Harpster. The grader was also being driven west, and the truck in swinging out to pass it caught it in a side-swipe and shoved it into the ditch. The truck continued on down the road for 250 feet before it headed for the ditch where it also turned over on its side and almost immediately was enveloped in flames.

Colner and his relief driver, William Heard, 23, also of Akron, were able to crawl from the cab before that part had caught fire, but did receive singed eyebrows and hair. Both also suffered lacerations and bruises about their heads. Rouse was thrown under the grader, but luckily escaped being crushed by the heavy vehicle and was able to crawl from under machine. He sustained severe bruises and minor lacerations.

The fire in the truck spread quickly over the load, the new tires and other pieces of merchandise adding fuel to the flames. All tires on the truck wheels were also burned and potato and other plants in the nearby truck garden belonging to T. C. Grossman were scorched for a radius of nearly 100 feet.

The loss of the truck was estimated at over $4,000, which is covered by insurance. The load and trailer were destroyed and the tractor also was badly damaged. Considerable damage was also done to the road grader. Deputy Sheriff Fred L. Jones investigated. Colner was brought to Upper Sandusky where he is being attended at the office of a local physician, while the other two men were given first aid treatment on the scene of the accident.

SHEEP CLAIMS GAIN IN MORROW COUNTY

Deficit in Dog and Kennel Fund Feared.

Special to The Star

MT. GILEAD, July 24—Although 51 dogs have been destroyed by Floyd Sterritt, Morrow county dog warden, since his appointment in May, sheep losses have mounted steadily and threaten to result in a deficit in the dog and kennel fund before the end of the year.

In the week ending last Saturday over $200 worth of claims were filed with the county commissioners for sheep losses.

The condition this year is in sharp contrast to the last two when claims fell to an all time low and enabled the commissioners to set dog license fees at the minimum required by the state laws. A deficit of $1,500 was paid off and there was a surplus of $1,500 at the end of 1939.

If claims continue at the present rate the fund will be entirely exhausted before the end of the year and the commissioners will be forced to raise the dog license fees.

UNSOLD WHEAT FILLS STORAGE

Government Loan Plan Keeps Millions of Bushels from Market.

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., July 24.—Millions of unsold wheat are piled up in the nation's warehouses—the result of government measures designed to keep prices from falling too low. The government's loan plan, which has been in effect since the harvest period began, has already kept about 100,000 bushels of wheat from the market. BIBLE CONFERENCE ON THROUGH FRIDAY

Indiana Minister Speaks on "The Image of God."

Services of the Bible conference now in its second week at the Chautauqua pavilion, under auspices of the Central Ohio Young People's Fellowship, will continue through Friday night with evangelistic services at 7:45 each night. There will be Bible study periods each afternoon.

Last night Rev. Clifford Hollifield of Fort Wayne Ind. preached on "The Image of God." He spoke in part as follows: "You can't approach God through created matter. He is revealed only through Jesus Christ and no other. Some worship the created and not the Creator. If Jesus Christ were preeminent to this place would be filled with God. When God is in first place how different we are. When filled with the knowledge of His will then He will have the preeminence. God has a plan for man to rule through Christ. In the Cross of Calvary is peace. Man wants the very things God has prepared for him but he wants them in his own way. God wants to give them His way."

Rev. Harold Primer of Chicago who plans to go to the Philippine Islands in the fall spoke yesterday afternoon of the worldwide need for evangelists of the Christian faith. He pointed to the fact that since the collapse of Scandinavia some 600 missionaries in that field are working with no financial support. People of the world are hungry to hear the Gospel of Christ, he said. "It is up to the church people to tell them. Our country is turning away from the Gospel. If you had a meeting like this in Manila this pavilion wouldn't hold the people."

Formulating of a plan whereby residents of Marion and vicinity may contribute to the support of Rev. and Mrs. Palmer was discussed. Bert Wilhoit of Fort Wayne was in charge of music both afternoon and night. Mrs. Hollifield led the singing at the evening service.

ROOSEVELT JIBES AT WILLKIE DEMOCRATS

Sentiment on Switches Expressed at Press Meeting.

By The Associated Press
HYDE PARK, N. Y., July 24.—Signs that the 1940 campaign might develop along conventional lines appeared today as a result of President Roosevelt's use of a political bludgeon on a quartet of Democrats who have gone over to the Republican camp.

Mr. Roosevelt may make no attempt to match campaign speeches and stumping tours with Wendell L. Willkie, his Republican rival in the presidential race but the manner in which he spoke yesterday of four anti-third term Democrats left scant room for doubt that he would take steps to meet opposition blows with counter punches of his own.

He could have exercised his skill in blocking questions with political implications yesterday at his first press conference since he said "yes" to the demand of the Democratic convention that he run for a third term.

Instead, led on by the inquiries he swung verbally on Sen. Edward R. Burke former Sen. James A. Reed of Missouri and two erstwhile administration officials Lewis W. Douglas and John W. Hanes. All of them have offered their support to Willkie.

The world bolt he said did not describe accurately the action of Burke who rejected the Democratic senatorial nomination to Governor R. L. Cochran in the Nebraska primary.

Mr. Roosevelt said he understood the Democratic party had bolted Burke. Describing Douglas and Hanes as honorable and amiable young men, the President said he thought the consensus in the government was that their slant of mind ran more to dollars than to humanity.

Douglas once was budget director and Hanes under secretary of the treasury. Reed came in for a share of presidential attention when a reporter asserted that the former legislator had called on "grass root Jeffersonian Democrats" to assemble in Chicago.

The Missouriian did about the same thing in 1932 and 1936 and perhaps in 1938 Mr. Roosevelt said and consequently was well qualified by experience. And he added we all remember that "sweatshop matter of course. He did not amplify that statement.

A White House official said that the Donnelly Garment Co. of Kansas City headed by Reed's wife was the subject of a formal complaint filed last year by the national labor relations board that Reed argued the case orally in Washington. That the board held against the company and that an appeal was taken last March to the eighth circuit court of appeal.

British Estimate German Plane Losses at 5,000

By The Associated Press
LONDON, July 24.—Germany has lost 4,000 to 5,000 planes since the war began, British sources asserted today. Britain's gradual claim that Germany is overhauling Germany in the race for control of the skies.

The royal air force is gaining power steadily through more than doubled home production plus increased American deliveries, these sources said, although conceding that German mass production probably had raised the Nazis' numerical strength higher than at the outset of hostilities.

Estimates last September placed the German air force of first line warplanes at 5,000 to 6,000, as compared with Britain's 2,000 to 4,000. Reuters British news agency, said well informed London circles figured German production of planes was being maintained at around about 1,800 a month and added.

That is a figure which Britain may be said today to be rapidly approaching although she has yet to overhaul it. The British admitted that by the end of the summer the air battles so far fought might appear insignificant but pointed to their balance sheet of the first month of daily engagements and the start of the second.

Reuters said since June 17, when Germany launched mass air attacks against England the plane losses compiled from official British records gave this score: German planes shot down, 133 British 91.

The Nazi Luftwaffe (air force) losses were given as 92 bombers, chiefly Heinkel 111's, Dornier 17's and Junkers 88's and 47 and 41 fighters, Messerschmitt 109's and 110's.

Royal air force losses were given as 68 bombers and 22 fighters. British estimated that 400 German airmen were killed or captured from June 17 to July 17. Reuters said Germany would stand thus less far less easily than the RAF and observed this neatly redresses injustice done to Britain when 400 German airmen taken prisoner in the battle of France largely as a result of RAF action were released by the German government.

Reuters said German planes cost only about two thirds of what British planes do. The Nazi Luftwaffe (air force) losses were given as 92 bombers, chiefly Heinkel 111's, Dornier 17's and Junkers 88's and 47 and 41 fighters, Messerschmitt 109's and 110's.

Rates on State Compensation Reduced To Save $1,500,000

Ohio Employers Benefitted as Industrial Insurance Fund Grows

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., July 24.—Reduction of workmen's compensation insurance rates an average of 9.4 per cent with an anticipated saving to Ohio employers of more than $1,500,000 during the next 12 months was announced today by the state industrial commission.

A financial statement of the commission disclosed that $2,054,002 was added to the Ohio state insurance fund surplus in 1939 making a total surplus of $3,812,881 at the start of 1940. Premium collections last year amounted to $18,214,045, of which $8.4 per cent was allocated to meek losses. Investment earnings totaled $1,929,504.

E. J. Evans commission actuary attributed the new rate reductions to compliance enforcement activity to bring into the fund the employers who have failed to carry insurance. More than 5,000 employers were added to premium rolls since January and the insurance fund had a record member of 32,005 employers' accounts at the end of June. Secretary Don W. Wiper said.

The new rate schedules lower premiums in 205 of the 380 workers' classifications covered. Increase rates in 18 others and leave 166 unchanged. Wiper described the new rates as follows: Building construction 30 cents to 35 cents; electrical 30 cents to 35 cents; mechanical 30 cents to 35 cents; manufacturing 30 cents to 35 cents; retail 30 cents to 35 cents; service 30 cents to 35 cents; transportation 30 cents to 35 cents; wholesale 30 cents to 35 cents.

British Answer To Hitler's Offer Irritates Nazis

By DEWITT MCKENZIE
Hitler's peace ultimatum has evoked the angry retort from Britain that this has "torn the lid off" and that England has signed her own death warrant.

When the Germans will unleash the full strength of the blitzkrieg for the annihilation of Britain is still a Nazi secret, but it is promised soon. Indeed, with little good summer flying weather left, especially over northern England and Scotland the Nazi must strike quickly. Even August frequently produces bad visibility in the north.

Germany can't afford to let the war run on. England too much time to prepare her defense which daily grows stronger and would put a heavy strain on Nazi resources.

Battle Warming Up
Actually of course the battle of Britain has been warming up since June 17 when the Germans began mass bombing. We may expect this to swell to great proportions shortly when the Germans will undertake to give England the blitz which they long have threatened.

The big question naturally is whether Hitler will undertake the stupendous and hazy adventure of trying to invade England. My observation is that many military experts believe he will be taking a great chance of disaster if he attempts it. Still I have the feeling that he is too ambitious to let the war run on. England too much time to prepare her defense which daily grows stronger and would put a heavy strain on Nazi resources.

Failure Likely
Should he fail it might really represent a real catastrophe. The least that would happen would be a terrific knock at German military prestige at home and abroad. However, it is difficult to see how he can abandon the project now. Hitler has advanced the invasion date for July 15. The world is waiting for it with bated breath. It won't be long before Germany will be in a position to come off.

It seems to me that it all gets down to the position to which I have pointed before—that any successful invasion must be premised on bombing England into a state of helplessness first. Can that be done? The British say no and the Germans say yes. I don't know and neither will any body else until it has been tried.

Willkie attended the dinner before boarding an airplane for Salt Lake City and visits to rodeo at Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah. At the start of the dinner he took off his coat and several hundred other men followed suit. The merry had gone in 87 degrees earlier in the day while Willkie was attending the opening of the Cheyenne front end rodeo.

The nominee told the 700 diners he was proud his Republican nomination had come from the new leadership in the party. "The lights of liberty are going out one by one in Europe and the only way to keep them burning brightly here in America is under a leadership that believes in America," Willkie said.

"We must build an economic system subject to reasonable control but build one that will function." "This government belongs to the people and we are going to return it to them." On leaving the Maconic temple where the dinner was held Willkie told a crowd waiting outside that if you elect me president I pledge you this great democracy never will be destroyed by individual attacks from within or above. Join us in this great crusade. We must keep lit this torch of democracy."

Questioned by reporters about President Roosevelt's remarks regarding Willkie's Democratic supporters the Republican nominee said "The President is going to have to make remarks about a lot of Democrats before this campaign is over. This shows that the President is thinking of something besides the affairs of state."

FRANCE PLACES BLAME IN WAR

Daladier Ordered Confined to Marseille; Others Hunted by Laval Regime.

By The Associated Press
VICHY, France, July 24.—Former Premier Edouard Daladier, whose government declared war on Germany last fall, was confined today within the city of the new Petain-Laval regime marked for investigation and possible punishment for alleged responsibility for France's entry into the conflict and for her defeat.

Also confined to Marseille pending "investigation" with Daladier were several other former government leaders and members of parliament who arrived at the southern port yesterday from French Morocco where they had fled with Daladier on June 20. This was two days before signing of the French German armistice but, according to the present government, three days after that armistice was asked for.

The government of Premier Marshal Philippe Petain and Vice Premier Pierre Laval was described authoritatively as entering a new and more vigorous phase of activity and it was added that punishment will come for those responsible for the war.

Just what the punishment would be was not immediately clear but last night simultaneously with announcement of the step against Daladier and his aids the cabinet approved a decree for withdrawal of French citizenship and confiscation of all property of all Frenchmen who left France without valid reasons between May 10 the day the German western offensive began and June 30, eight days after signing of the armistice.

to be offered today for preliminary study. The commission on maintenance of peace headed by United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull had before it a proposal to set up collective trusteeship over western hemisphere colonies of European nations in the event of an attempt by another non-American state to acquire them.

The first draft of this resolution provides such a joint maintenance of peace would be shared in by ratifying republics and would operate when any nation saw its security threatened. The draft made clear that only temporary control was contemplated with eventual return of the colonies to the original sovereigns or ultimate independence.

Economic Plan Studied
Before the economic commission was the United States suggestions for curing the American continental economic ills. Because of the possibility of drastic revision of the proposals, which were withheld on the ground that they represented only working drafts and the final products would emerge as recommendations of the commission, headed by Eduardo Suarez of Mexico.

Secretary Hull conferred privately yesterday with the Argentine delegation which was reported to be taking a hesitant attitude regarding any broad commitments fearing an adverse effect on Argentina's future trade relations with Europe.
